“Biophysical Chemistry in Drug Design: Impact, Challenges and Opportunities” by
Dr. Manoj Munde
(Assistant Professor)

Biophysical Chemistry Lab School of Physical Sciences Jawaharlal Nehru University, New Delhi

Dr. Manoj Munde

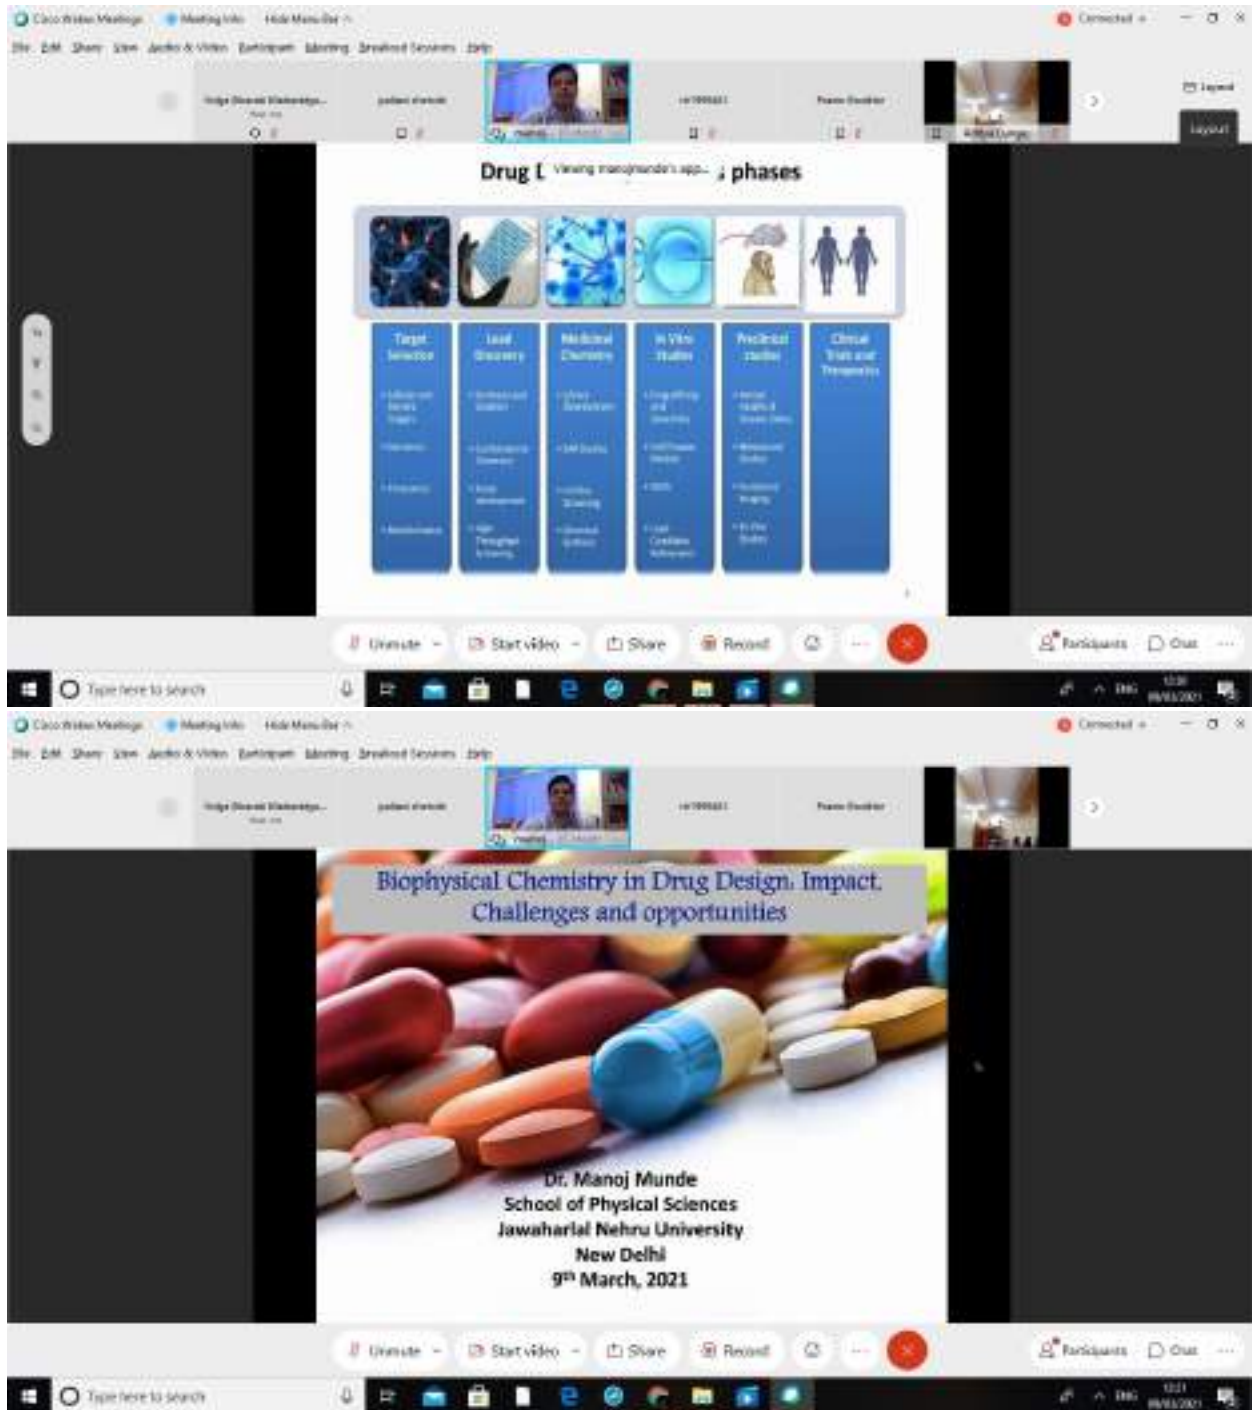

Abstract :
The role of Biophysical Chemistry in Drug Discovery is to guide new techniques and approaches to identifying and characterizing small molecules in early drug discovery. Drug development, from the initial discovery of a promising target to the final medication, is a highly laborious, expensive and lengthy process. Also, due to the challenges posed by existing as well as new upcoming complicated diseases, it is imperative that we must come up with the novel ideas to fast-track drug discovery processes. Biophysical research is reasserting its utility in drug discovery, and many academic institutions and multinational pharmaceutical companies have set up a biophysical research department as part of their R&D efforts with an increased focus on the more nuanced characterization of small molecule drugs. In my presentation, with the help of few examples, I will talk about the current affairs in the field of drug discovery and explain how interdisciplinary research; especially biophysical research would be a key to making steadfast progress in the discovery of novel drugs.
